

CALL FOR PAPERS

01 JUNE 2017

Special Section, 31 December 2017: The Ideal of the International – Principles, Backlash and Resistance

The rise of nationalism and populism in liberal democracies, the cold responses to humanitarian crises, as well as Brexit, and Trump have hit hard against ideals and principles that international lawyers have long – maybe too long – taken for granted. Solidarity, humanitarianism, cooperation, trusteeship, and responsible leadership are under attack. What will be the consequences? What is at stake and for whom? Should international accommodate, or become a force of resistance?

With the 30th Helsinki Summer Seminar, Volume 26 of the Finnish Yearbook of International Law (FYBIL) offers a forum for discussing and reflecting on these matters, debate the issues, and formulate solutions to perceived problems.

Those interested in publishing an article in the special section of FYBIL Volume 26 (The Ideal of the International – Principles, Backlash and Resistance) should submit their manuscripts by 31 December 2017. The manuscripts should not exceed 15,000 words in length including footnotes.

General Section

FYBIL honours and strengthens the Finnish tradition in international legal scholarship.

While firmly grounded in traditional legal scholarship, FYBIL is open to contributions from all over the world and from all persuasions. It stands out as a forum for theoretically informed, inter-disciplinary, and high-quality publications on all aspects of public international law.

Annual volumes of FYBIL include articles, shorter notes, commentaries, book reviews, and overviews of Finnish State practice.

Submissions for the general and special sections of FYBIL undergo a double-blind review. The editorial board and renowned experts of various areas of international law will review the submissions' intellectual quality and prospects for advancing academic debate.

FYBIL accepts submissions for the general section continuously.

All inquiries and materials should be sent to fybil@fsil.fi
